With just a few clicks, you can create a website from scratch, modify existing pages, and easily transfer the project to a web server. The application has a simple interface with just three main windows: the Home window, the Page List window, and the Page Design window. The Home window shows the current project's name, its complete path, and its main page. The Page List window shows all the web pages of the project. You can add pages to your project, edit their content, and change their order. The Page Design window allows you to edit and save the HTML code of web pages. It is divided into two sections: one for the HTML code and one for the design. You can browse the website with the address bar, the Bookmarks bar, and the Window menu. WebSiteDesigner's integration with external applications makes it much more powerful than other web page editors. You can work with HTML pages using Notepad and the Send to Web server using the FTP program included with Windows. You can also work with CSS, JavaScript, and PHP in Visual Web Developer, and with HTML and XHTML in the WYSIWYG editor of Visual Studio or Microsoft WebMatrix. WebSiteDesigner allows you to work with different styles of web page design: fluid or fixed, wide or normal, and so on. You can edit HTML code and CSS using any of the available HTML editing tools, so you can modify color, font, and other visual aspects of your pages. You can also work with XHTML code using the WYSIWYG editor. To make a page design even more professional, you can add graphic elements using the Insert menu or the Pages list window. Website design will be even easier and faster with the integrated project manager. You can create projects, move pages 1d6a3396d6
