7th Edition: Kharakterizirovanie i obyektivni vokabularny katalog (Romanized) 7th Edition: Characterizirovanie and object-based vocabulary catalog (Romanized) See all the web pages in this file: This is a dictionary in which you can find the word for any of the many names used in the writing systems of the world, including English. So you can quickly find out the word for 'Yes', 'No', 'Able', 'Gold', 'Straight', 'Almond', 'Baron', 'Somali', etc. 'How to use it?' You can simply use the English-Russian Dictionary by selecting the first letter or the first two letters of the word you want. You can find the many thousands of words that can be selected in a simple and easy to use search tool. The list of each and every word can be expanded and panned around to look at any of the letters you want. 'Where to get it?' The English-Russian Dictionary (download) is free for anyone to download. The same dictionary is also distributed free in many different formats, so you can download it and use it in as many different applications as you like. These formats include: Macintosh/Windows/HTML - this is the only format we recommend Macintosh/HTML - This format is easy to use and provides a link to the dictionary at the bottom of any web page you are viewing. Most people who use this format use a word processing program and can easily cut and paste the dictionary link to any of their documents. (Read the How to Use it section for more information). And last but not least, a word of explanation: This dictionary was created as an aid to people who need to write in English but don't know the Russian vocabulary. In fact, this dictionary is not a dictionary of Russian words. It is a dictionary of the English translation of Russian words. This is for English-Russian speakers who need to write in Russian. And if you can't read Russian and want to know how to write Russian, then we recommend that you use the Russian-English dictionary by James Murray (3rd edition) or the Romanized Cyrillic-Russian alphabet by Roschak K. (1st edition).

Define a regular expression which will enable one to define a macro, which performs the regular expression operation when the cursor is placed on a specific word. Example: When the cursor is on a word "полчаса" the macro would generate "полчаса" plus a ">" to indicate the start of the next phrase. KEYCURSOR Description: When the cursor is moved to the beginning of the line, the cursor automatically moves to the beginning of the phrase. When the cursor is placed on a specific word, the cursor moves to the word (with one exception). Example: If the cursor is on a word "полчаса" the cursor moves to the word "полчаса" (see example 2). KEYNEXT Description: When the cursor is on a word, this macro will define the next word by executing the macro defined by "KEYCURSOR". The cursor stays on the same word. Example: "Обувка" and "полчаса" are next words for the word "полчаса". KEYPREVIOUS Description: When the cursor is on a word, this macro will define the previous word by executing the macro defined by "KEYCURSOR". The cursor stays on the same word. Example: "Обувка" and "полчаса" are previous words for the word "полчаса". KEYBACK Description: When the cursor is on a word, this macro will define the back word by executing the macro defined by "KEYCURSOR" (see example 2). Example: "Обувка" and "полчаса" are back words for the word "полчаса". KEYFIND Description: When the cursor is on a word, this macro will define the find word by executing the macro defined by "KEYCURSOR" (see example 2). The cursor stays on the word where it is found. Example: "Обувка" and "полчаса" are found words for the word "п 77a5ca646e
