What's new in Human Sacrifice:

by Patrick Baehni and Martin Antoniotto There is a huge item in year-end sales for Linux users: The Train Simulator: Peninsula Corridor: San Francisco - Gilroy Route Add-On. By Howard Chay and Martin Antoniotto. This very detailed add-on can be yours for only 150GBP. You can find it on the Steam store, and as an exclusive gift for the first 20 threads at SimHQ. Presented by Patrick Baehni (7G) and Martin Antoniotto (9G). Here a few words about the add-on and some hints for being part of the first twenty people who are going to meet us at the SimHQ this weekend: This is a 2D air-rail route, mainly in the US. The major US airports are served, as well as the many famous US railway junctions (Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, Dallas, Minneapolis, San Francisco and Santa Fe). The route consists of four main lines, and many stops. from San Francisco downtown, it contains the Caltrain station (372 stops), the Amtrak station (361 stops), the Transbay Terminal downtown (77 stops), the King Street Station (a railway, the light rail and the new BART subway station). After San Francisco it goes through the entire state of California, including San Joaquin, Folsom, San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, Richmond (a very detailed city) until reach Los Angeles. From San Francisco-Los Angeles, it also passes through San Bernardino and San Clemente at San Diego, and then goes down through San Diego to reach Los Angeles with a total of 944 stops. From Los Angeles, it then reaches San Francisco-Sacramento after 34 stops, and then continues to Sacramento with just 64 stops. All the locations are named in an attempt to make it difficult to guess which spot is where. Besides the station locations and the tracks, there are also many trains on this route, and many unique features. 10 million pieces of scenery. 3D Powerplay with realistic train-consist. The main job of the route designer was to create a system based on many degrees of freedom (space, time, gravity, and movement) that would allow the train driver to plan his route while in the cockpit. This train is built with the tracks only. More
