I tried @Resource and @EJB annotations to inject the EJB bean in CDI scope. @Resource private void setEjbBean(Ejb ejb) { this.ejb = ejb; } I am getting the following exception: The bean named 'ejb' has a scope type that is neither 'prototype' nor 'application' A: This sounds like you have a persistence layer that is using the EJB 3.1 API, which is a JPA API. The persistence layer will probably be intercepting the injection of the EJBs and trying to wire in a JPA implementation of the EJB 3.1 API. Unfortunately there is no portable way to inject a JPA API implementation without some more effort. If you use the embedded database, H2, you can specify a custom provider in the persistence.xml. Detection of Ki-ras point mutation in colorectal carcinoma tissue using a lock nucleic acid probe. Mutations at codon 12 of Ki-ras have been identified in most colorectal cancers. These mutations are very sensitive and specific for the detection of colorectal carcinomas in biopsy samples. We developed an LNA probe that can detect Ki-ras mutations in colorectal carcinomas. The detection of Ki-ras mutations in cancer tissue using the LNA probe was evaluated. The LNA probe has a greater sensitivity than other detection methods. Our method is a powerful tool for tumor-specific cancer diagnosis. what. But the guy's a dingus on the field, with no shame. I'm not interested in what you _don't_ want to talk about, but having seen the effect of Herndon in the past, and how he's impacted the organization since he got here,
